KYLE TRASK IS OUR PICK AS THE FRONT RUNNER TO THE HEISMAN TROPHY

Gator QB Trask is Shredding Defenses

Recap

Is Kyle Trask now the frontrunner for the Heisman Trophy? With Justin Fields, Trevor Lawrence and Mac Jones idle on Saturday due to COVID-19, the Florida QB turned in another Heisman-caliber performance by throwing for 356 yards and six TDs in a 63-35 rout of Arkansas. That marked Trask's sixth straight game passing for four or more TDs, including the win over Georgia and the 41-38 loss to Texas A&M. Through six games he has thrown for 2,171 yards with 28 touchdown passes and three interceptions.

But the reality is that his Heisman hopes likely hinge on the SEC championship game and a showdown with Alabama. That game would take place Dec. 19. Because of scheduling adjustments due to COVID-19, Heisman ballots are now due Dec. 21, with the announcement ceremony taking place Jan. 5.

Until then, Trask should keep piling up dazzling stats with Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Tennessee and LSU left for the Gators during the regular season.

With Ohio State's game last Saturday against improved Maryland canceled due to COVID-19, do we really know how good the Buckeyes are – and when will we know (and don't give us that "they pass eye-test" BS since they haven't played or beaten anybody of consequence yet)?

To get to 3-0, Ohio State has beaten 1-2 Nebraska, 0-4 Penn State and 1-3 Rutgers. Still left to play are 1-3 Illinois, 1-3 Michigan State and 1-3 Michigan. That's a lot of bad opponents that comprise six-sevenths of Ohio State's regular-season schedule, which makes Saturday's game against 4-0 Indiana (in Columbus) a showcase game for Ryan Day's bunch. The Buckeyes can't just win that game, they need to win it impressively, because their only other chance for another quality win would come in the Big Ten championship game. Justin Fields has been the real deal and Ohio State's offense can keep pace with any team in the country. But the defense has been leaky at times and there still isn't a quality win for the Buckeyes to hang their helmets on. Just saying.

Did any playoff hopeful have a better weekend than Cincinnati? The Bearcats' place in the Top 10 remained secure following a 55-17 victory over East Carolina, with QB Desmond Ridder turning in another big game (327 passing yards and three TDs, 75 rushing yards and one score). But just as significant as Cincinnati going to 7-0 were two other occurrences: UCF moved to 5-2 with a 38-13 rout of Temple and Tulsa improved to 4-1 by rallying for a 28-24 victory over No. 19-ranked SMU, which was 7-1 entering the game.

That's important for Luke Fickell's team because the Bearcats are at UCF on Saturday and then close out the regular season at Tulsa on Dec. 4. Those are opportunities to add significantly to credentials that are already solid. The Playoff Committee has its work cut out trying to figure out if a potential 11-0 Cincinnati belongs as one of the four playoff teams.

Cincinnati didn't earn any more playoff support with its behavior at the end of a 55-17 victory over ECU, running a successful fake punt while leading 42-10 in the fourth quarter (coach Luke Fickell insisted the call was not made from the sidelines). That could be excused if the Bearcats had simply taken a knee to run out the clock with 17 seconds left in the rout. Instead they handed off to Cameron Young, who went 75 yards for a touchdown.

Was there a wilder finish to a game last week than Western Michigan-Toledo? This is why MACtion is great any day of the week. Don't forget, we have guaranteed college football picks for all the Tuesday & Wednesday MAC games at <https://www.gridirongold.com/guaranteed-nfl-football-picks.html> and the non guaranteed picks are only $9 each.

Toledo held a 38-28 lead with 2:45 to play when Western Michigan QB Kaleb Eleby drove his team 70 yards in 11 plays, capping the drive with a touchdown run with 45 seconds to play. When the extra point was missed, making it 38-34, it meant WMU needed a touchdown to win and not just a field goal to force overtime – if it recovered the ensuing onside kick.

The Broncos did just that, eventually reaching the Toledo nine yard line with 20 seconds left and no timeouts, with Eleby signaling for all to see that he intended to spike the ball. But instead of clock-killing spike, Eleby pulled Dan Marino, faking the spike and lofting the game-winning touchdown pass to Jaylen Hall, who didn't have a defender within 20 yards of him. Eleby accounted for five TDs, two in the final 45 seconds.

On the Rise

Northwestern (4-0) - The Wildcats can choke the life out of opposing offenses with their defense. The 4-0 start is the program's best since 1996, when head coach Pat Fitzgerald was playing linebacker for them. Now comes the biggest test yet: Wisconsin on Saturday.

Tulsa (4-1) - Golden Hurricane rallied from a 21-point second quarter deficit for a 28-24 victory over No. 19-ranked SMU, holding the Mustangs without a point in the second half. It's the third time this year that Tulsa has rallied to win after trailing by double digits in the first half and marked the first time in program history that Tulsa has notched two wins over ranked opponents in the same season.

Miami (7-1) - Credit to the Hurricanes for surviving a trap game against Virginia Tech to stay in the hunt for the ACC championship game with a 25-24 victory – despite missing 13 players due to COVID-19 protocols. QB D'Eriq King is the gift that keeps on giving for Manny Diaz.

On the decline

South Carolina (2-5) - If the swirling rumors are true it looks like the end is near for Gamecocks coach Will Muschamp after a 59-42 loss to Ole Miss, which rolled up a school record 708 yards of offense in an SEC game. USC's three-game losing streak has seen the defense allow 159 points.

Akron (0-2) - Yawn, another loss, this one by 24-10 to Ohio. That's 19 straight losses for the Zips, who have not won a game since Oct. 27, 2018. Coach Tom Arth is off to an 0-14 start since replacing Terry Bowden.

Penn State (0-4) - We get injuries and graduation. But it's hard to believe that a recruiter extraordinaire like James Franklin – recruiting is his strength as a coach, right? – doesn't have a reliable running back or a competent quarterback. The 0-4 start is the program's worst since 2001 and Penn State has never opened 0-5. That could change Saturday against Iowa.

Who's hot

Ian Book, QB, Notre Dame - Has he inserted himself into the Heisman conversation the way he has played the past two games? It seems that way. The 8-0 Irish side stepped a potential land mine with a 45-31 victory over BC, with Book throwing for 283 yards and three TDs and rushing for 85 yards and a score.

Sam Howell, QB, North Carolina - The sophomore passed for a school-record 550 yards and six TDs and scrambled 20 yards for the go-ahead touchdown with 4:11 left in a wild 59-53 victory over Wake Forest. Howell rallied the Tar Heels from a 45-24 deficit with 35 unanswered points.

Jonathan Gariby, PK, Texas Tech - The transfer from Riverside Community College, making his first start with the Red Raiders in place of the struggling Tey Wolff, connected on a 25-yard field goal on the game's final play to give Texas Tech a 24-23 victory over Baylor. It was one of four field goals in the game for Gariby.

Who's not

Joe Milton, QB, Michigan - It's hard to believe this is what Jim Harbaugh has at QB these days. Milton was benched in the 49-11 loss to Wisconsin after going 9-of-19 for 98 yards with two interceptions. He managed 15 yards rushing on seven carries.

Rocky Lombardi, QB, Michigan State - Looks as if Rocky's 60 minutes of fame (the Michigan game) has ended with a thud. He was 3-of-7 for 21 yards with two interceptions and rushed for minus-seven yards before being replaced in the 24-0 loss to Indiana.

Noah Vedral, QB, Rutgers - Three interceptions over the final 18 minutes, two in the fourth quarter -- with the final one leading to Illinois' game-winning field goal in a 23-20 victory -- undermined the Scarlet Knights' chances of beating the winless, floundering Illini. Vedral now has seven INTs to five TD passes this year.

Previewing the top games coming up this weekend (All times Eastern)

Indiana at Ohio State, Noon, FOX - A showdown for control of the Big Ten East -- go figure. Surprising Hoosiers are 4-0 and represent the only regular-season test for the 3-0 Buckeyes.

Appalachian State at Coastal Carolina, Noon, ESPN2 - App State, 6-1, takes on 7-0 Coastal with first place in the Sun Belt East at stake.

Cincinnati at USF, 3:30 p.m., ESPN - This should be a good one, with the Bearcats' stout defense put to the test by Dillon Gabriel and UCF's high-scoring offense. Can Cincy continue to state its case as a playoff candidate?

Wisconsin at Northwestern, 3:30 p.m. - Two unbeaten, both ranked, with first-place in the Big Ten West on the line. Badgers are making noises as a potential playoff team after just two games played. This should tell more.

Liberty at North Carolina State, 7:30 p.m., ESPN3 - Flames, 8-0, will look to notch a second victory over an ACC opponent in what has become a breakout season for the program. Wolfpack should have plenty of incentive for this rare non-conference game.

Oklahoma State at Oklahoma, 7:30 p.m., ABC - Not so much bedlam this year as a backyard brawl. Cowboys still have their sights on a Big 12 title game appearance. Sooners look to have recovered from a rocky start and are back on track with one of the country's most explosive offenses. OSU's defense has been very stubborn all year.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL BEST BETS

Georgia Southern + 5½ Over Army by 7

The Georgia Southern Eagles will look to build on their 6-2 record this season after making it 3 straight wins with a 40-38 win over Texas State last time out. Shai Werts has thrown for 789 yards, 5 touchdowns and 6 interceptions on 58.9% passing while sitting 2nd on the team in rushing with 594 rushing yards and 6 touchdowns this season. J.D. King has a team-high 625 rushing yards and 5 touchdowns while Wesley Kennedy III has 378 rushing yards and 6 TDs this season. Logan Wright has 317 rushing yards while Matt LaRoche and Gerald Green each have 100+ rushing yards as well this season. Malik Murray leads the Eagles with 13 catches for 195 yards while Kennedy III, Khaleb Hood and Beau Johnson all have 100+ receiving yards as well this season. On defense, Rashad Byrd leads Georgia Southern with 47 total tackles including 24 solo tackles while Reynard Ellis has a team-high 25 solo tackles this season. Derrick Canteen has a team-high 4 interceptions and Raymond Johnson III has 4 sacks to lead the Eagles in that department this season.

The Army Black Knights also sit at 6-2, looking to bounce back from a 38-12 loss to Tulane last time out. Christian Anderson has thrown for 158 yards, a touchdown and 3 interceptions on 37.5% passing while Jemel Jones has 156 yards passing with 2 TDs and 2 interceptions on 47.4% passing and Cade Ballard has a touchdown pass and 106 yards on 50% passing. Tyrell Robinson leads Army with 347 rushing yards while Jakobi Buchanan and the aforementioned Anderson each have 300+ rushing yards and 4 touchdowns this season. Anthony Adkins has 266 rushing yards and 4 TDs while Jones, Tyhier Tyler and Sandon McCoy all have 200+ rushing yards with McCoy logging 210 yards and a team-high 8 touchdowns. Cade Barnard and Artice Hobbs IV each have 100+ rushing yards this season. Michael Roberts leads Army in receiving with 7 catches for 106 yards while Tyrell Robinson has a pair of touchdown grabs. On defense, Jon Rhattigan has a team-high 60 total tackles with a pair of interceptions while Marquel Broughton has a team-high 29 solo tackles and a pair of interceptions. Jabari Moore also has a pair of interceptions while Arik Smith has a team-high 3 sacks and Cedrick Cunningham Jr. and Amadeo West each have a pair of sacks this season.

Georgia Southern is 1-4 ATS in their last 5 road games and 4-1 ATS in their last 5 games against independents while the under is 4-0 in their last 4 non-conference games. Army is 2-6 ATS in their last 8 games against a team with a winning record and 5-2 ATS in their last 7 games overall while the under is 6-0 in their last 6 games against the Sun Belt.

I get Army being favored at home, but I don't agree with it. Army's defensive numbers look good on the surface, but that's because they've played a cupcake schedule and the two times they had to step up, the Black Knights got sat down by Cincinnati and most recently Tulane. That Tulane loss really pissed me off because they lost during Veterans week. The rest of their schedule? Three non-FBS teams and the trio of UTSA, Middle Tennessee and Louisiana-Monroe. Outside of UTSA, Middle Tennessee and ULM are a combined 2-14 this season.

Georgia Southern's done well in the Sun Belt this season with their two losses coming against Louisiana and Coastal Carolina, two ranked Sun Belt teams (when was the last time you could say that?) that are leading the two divisions in the conference. Both run the option, but Georgia Southern passes the ball much better, leaving their playbook a lot more wide open than Army's as well. I think the wrong team is favored here, so I'll take the points with Georgia Southern as I expect them to win straight-up.

Projected Score: Georgia Southern 24, Army 17

S.M.U. - 2½ Over Houston by 13

The Houston Cougars will look to get back above .500 after a 56-21 win over USF last time out. Clayton Tune has thrown for 1,562 yards, 11 touchdowns and 6 interceptions on 60.6% passing while sitting 2nd on the team in rushing with 233 rushing yards and 4 touchdowns. Kyle Porter has a team-high 324 rushing yards and 4 TDs while Mulbah Car, Chandler Smith and Kelan Walker each have 100+ rushing yards. Keith Corbin leads Houston's receiving group with 24 grabs for 333 yards while Marquez Stevenson has 278 receiving yards and a team-high 3 touchdowns. Nathaniel Dell and Tre'von Bradley each have 200+ receiving yards while Bryson Smith and Christian Trahan each have 100+ receiving yards this season. On defense, Grant Stuard leads Houston with 50 total tackles including 25 solo tackles while David Anenih has a team-high 4.5 sacks and Payton Turner isn't far behind with 4 sacks this season.

The SMU Mustangs will look to build on their strong 7-2 mark in conference play despite a 28-24 loss to Tulsa last time out. Shane Buechele has thrown for 2,781 yards, 21 touchdowns and 4 interceptions on 64.7% passing while Ulysses Bentley IV has 877 rushing yards and a team-high 11 rushing touchdowns. TJ McDaniel and Tyler Levine each have 200+ rushing yards as well for SMU this season, but McDaniel is out for the year due to a leg injury. Rashee Rice leads SMU with 43 catches for 637 yards and 5 touchdowns while Kylen Granson has 509 receiving yards and 4 receiving TDs. Reggie Roberson Jr. had 22 catches for 484 yards and 5 TDs before going down for the year due to a knee injury while Danny Gray has 33 catches for 448 yards and 4 scores and Tyler Page has 34 grabs for 396 yards this season. Defensively, Delano Robinson leads SMU with 71 total tackles including 48 solo tackles and 3 sacks while Richard McBryde and Elijah Chatman each have 3 sacks as well, but it's Turner Coxe who leads SMU with 3.5 sacks and Brandon Crossley has a team-high 4 interceptions for SMU this season.

Houston is 2-5 ATS in their last 7 games against a team with a winning record and 2-9 ATS in their last 11 games following a successful cover while the over is 6-1 in their last 7 road games against a team with a winning home record. SMU is 5-2 ATS in their last 7 games overall and 6-2 ATS in their last 8 games following a loss while the under is 4-1 in their last 5 home games. The home team is 4-0 ATS in the last 4 meetings between these two teams.

In most years, seeing SMU/Houston on a schedule, my mind would immediately lean towards a shootout. However, Houston's offense hasn't been as consistent as I would've expected and the defensive efforts haven't always been there either. SMU stumbled against Tulsa which is massive. Mustangs have to win out to have any hope of championship game, since they lost the head-to-head tiebreaker with both Cincinnati and Tulsa, ironically their two losses this season. I think this game just means more in the grand scheme of things to SMU, so I'll lay the points with the Mustangs at home in this spot.

Projected Score: SMU 40, Houston 27

Florida - 30½ Over Vanderbilt by 41

The Florida Gators will look to build on their three-game winning streak and 5-1 record after a 63-35 win over Arkansas last time out. Kyle Trask has thrown for 2,171 yards, 28 touchdowns and 3 interceptions on 70.1% passing while Dameon Pierce leads Florida in rushing with 290 rushing yards and a pair of ground scores. Malik Davis and Nay'Quan Wright each have 100+ rushing yards as well this season. Kyle Pitts leads Florida's receiving group with 414 receiving yards and 8 touchdowns while Kadarius Toney has a team-high 38 receptions for 396 yards and 6 scores. Trevon Grimes has 303 receiving yards with 5 TDs and the aforementioned Davis has 267 receiving yards while Jacob Copeland, Wright, Justin Shorter and Keon Zipperer each have 100+ receiving yards for the Gators this season. On defense, Ventrell Miller leads Florida with 41 total tackles including 23 solo tackles while Zachary Carter has a team-high 2.5 sacks this season.

The Vanderbilt Commodores will still be hunting for their first win of the season, sitting at 0-6 after a 38-35 loss to Kentucky last time out. Ken Seals has thrown for 1,291 yards, 8 touchdowns and 8 interceptions on 66.8% passing while Keyon Henry-Brooks has a team-high 374 rushing yards and 2 touchdowns. Ja'Veon Marlow and Jamauri Wakefield each have 100+ rushing yards while Cam Johnson leads Vandy's receiving corps with 37 grabs for 355 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Amir Abdur-Rahman, Ben Bresnahan, Henry-Brooks and Chris Pierce Jr. each have 200+ receiving yards with Bresnahan and Pierce Jr. each logging 3 receiving touchdowns this season. Defensively, Anfernee Orji leads Vanderbilt with 38 total tackles while Jaylen Mahoney and Allan George each have 20 solo tackles to lead the Commodores in that regard. Dayo Odeyingbo also has a team-high 3.5 sacks for the Commodores this season.

Florida is 10-4 ATS in their last 14 road games and 10-3 ATS in their last 13 conference games while the over is 7-1 in their last 8 games overall. Vanderbilt is 6-13 ATS in their last 19 games overall and 2-9 ATS in their last 11 home games while the under is 11-5 in their last 16 conference games. Florida is 5-1 ATS in the last 6 meetings between these two teams at Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt is coming off of their best offensive performance of the season, but the defense also gave up 38 points to a Kentucky team that had barely scored a third of that over the previous two games. I think that Florida's offense is the more reliable of the two, and I think if Florida wants to crack the playoff spots and if Kyle Trask wants to bolster his Heisman resume, the Gators need to put a hurting on Vanderbilt here. The Commodores have also lost all three of their home games by 33 or 34 points this season. Lay the lumber.

Projected Score: Florida 54, Vanderbilt 13

B.Y.U. - 48½ Over No Alabama by 37

The North Alabama Lions are 0-3 and hope to end their season with a massive upset victory. The North Alabama Lions have lost seven of their last eight road games. Blake Dever is completing 70.7 percent of his passes for 383 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions. Rett Files and Dever have combined for two touchdown passes and four interceptions. Dexter Boykin and Cortez Hall have combined for 180 receiving yards on 21 catches while Patrick McKaufman has eight receptions. The North Alabama Lions ground game is averaging 49.7 yards per contest, and Parker Driggers leads the way with 74 yards and two touchdowns. Defensively, North Alabama is allowing 25.3 points and 363.7 yards per game. Wallace Cowins leads the North Alabama Lions with 23 tackles, Christon Taylor has one sack and KJ Smith has one interception.

The BYU Cougars look to improve to 9-0 on the season while staying in the CFB playoff race. The BYU Cougars have won eight straight home games. Zach Wilson is completing 75.1 percent of his passes for 2,512 yards, 22 touchdowns and two interceptions. Wilson has three or more touchdown passes in four straight games. Dax Milne and Gunner Romney have combined for 1,453 receiving yards and eight touchdowns while Neil Pau'u has 27 receptions. The BYU Cougars ground game is averaging 192.8 yards per contest, and Tyler Allgeier leads the way with 710 yards and nine touchdowns. Defensively, BYU is allowing 13.9 points and 284.9 yards per game. Isaiah Kaufusi leads the BYU Cougars with 55 tackles, Tyler Batty has four sacks.

The North Alabama Lions haven't had much success this season, but they've had a rough schedule that includes games against Liberty and Southern Miss. North Alabama hasn't gotten blown out in any of its three losses and you know this club will be up for this game with it being the last game of its season. Oh ya, this is their final game of the season and they'll be stoked to go out with a massive upset. The BYU Cougars had an extra week off and it's human nature to kind of overlook this game, especially with a big game against San Diego State coming up. BYU could blow the doors off in this game, but most likely they get out front with a comfortable margin and decide to prevent injuries and rest their starters. Second half should see their entire second unit and that leaves an easy backdoor cover, especially with the boatload of points on the table.

It's North Alabama Lions and those boatload of points for me.

Projected Score: BYU 47, North Alabama 10

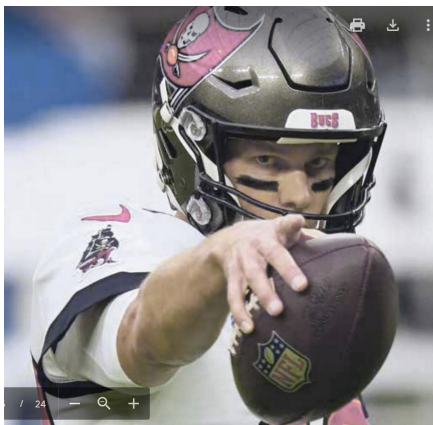

Troy - 10½ Over Middle Tenn St by 21

The Middle Tennessee Blue Raiders look for a win here after splitting their last four games. The Middle Tennessee Blue Raiders have lost three of their last five road games. Asher O'Hara is completing 65.3 percent of his passes for 1,750 yards, 12 touchdowns and eight interceptions. O'Hara has two or more touchdown passes in four of his last six games. Jarrin Pierce and Yusuf Ali have combined for 908 receiving yards and five touchdowns while CJ Windham has 29 receptions. The Middle Tennessee Blue Raiders ground game is averaging 129.1 yards per contest, and O'Hara leads the way with 515 yards and seven touchdowns. Defensively, Middle Tennessee is allowing 37.8 points and 452.8 yards per game. Reed Blankenship leads the Blue Raiders with 68 tackles, Cody Smith has three sacks and Gregory Grate Jr has three interceptions.

The Troy Trojans haven't played in two weeks and have split their last six games. The Troy Trojans have won four of their last six home games. Gunnar Watson is completing 69.5 percent of his passes for 1,159 yards, 10 touchdowns and three interceptions. Watson and Jacob Free have combined for 15 touchdown passes and seven interceptions. Kaylon Geiger and Reggie Todd have combined for 881 receiving yards and six touchdowns while Tray Eafford has 23 receptions. The Troy Trojans ground game is averaging 103.5 yards per contest, and Kimani Vidal leads the way with 393 yards and three touchdowns. Defensively, Troy is allowing 24.9 points and 393.3 yards per game. Carlton Martial leads the Troy Trojans with 55 tackles, Richard Jibunor has three sacks and Terence Dunlap has three interceptions.

The Middle Tennessee Blue Raiders hasn't played a lick of defense all season long and is now playing their third straight road game, which usually leads to tired legs and a team that just wants to go home. The Troy Trojans have played their best football at home, have had an extra week to prepare for this game and are a top-25 passing team in college football that should be able to expose MTSU defensive issues. Super trend is The favorite is 8-3-1 ATS in their last 12 meetings. I'll take Troy and lay the big number.

Projected Score: Troy 38, Mid Tenn St. 17

YA YOU, DON'T YOU EVEN THINK OF COUNTING US OUT, SECOND HALF OF THE SEASON STARTS NOW DUDE

Brady Bounces Back Big Time

Recap

Buccaneers 46, Panthers 23

Two weeks ago, Ronald Jones lost a fumble in his own territory to kick start a tight game for the Giants on Monday Night Football. History quickly repeated itself in this contest, as Jones lost a fumble on the opening possession deep in his own territory. The Panthers quickly turned the give-away into a touchdown, giving them momentum to either hold a lead or tie throughout the opening half. The Panthers were excellent in the early stages of this game, with Teddy Bridgewater completing his first 10 passes, while the Buccaneers continued to make mistakes. Jones dropped a pass, while Mike Evans stopped running a route in the end zone for some reason, resulting in an incompleteness instead of a touchdown.

Despite this, the Buccaneers were able to open up a lead in the second half. Jones, making amends for his previous mistakes, ripped off a 98-yard touchdown run to give the Buccaneers a two-score advantage. Bridgewater followed that up with a telegraphed interception, giving the Buccaneers even more points. Tampa completely dominated the second half, outscoring the Panthers, 29-6.

Tom Brady has a pristine record off a bye, so it's not a surprise that he performed so well in this game. It was an easy matchup to boot, so that would explain why Brady finished 28-of-39 for 341 yards and three touchdowns. He also scored on the ground via one of his patented sneaks.

It's worth noting that Brady could have enjoyed an even better outing. He was victimized by some drops, and Evans, as mentioned, stopped running a route on what could have been Brady's fourth aerial score.

Speaking of Evans, he finished second on the team in receiving with six catches for 77 yards and a great, leaping touchdown. He trailed only Chris Godwin (6-77), but could have had a much better game. In addition to that stopped route, Evans dropped a pass and was tackled inches shy of the end zone. He was also tripped up in the red zone; had he kept his feet, he would have scored.

As for Brady's other targets, both Rob Gronkowski (2-51) and Cameron Brate (3-31) caught touchdowns. Antonio Brown had a nice outing with seven grabs for 69 yards, including a one-handed catch. Brown would've had a better day had Brady not whiffed on a pass toward him for what should've been a big gain.

Jones, who seemingly crushed his team with another early fumble, finished with a great stat line, thanks to his 98-yard burst. He ran for 192 yards and a touchdown on 23 attempts. He left Leonard Fournette (8-19) in the dust.

Meanwhile, Bridgewater, who began the game 10-of-10, went just 8-of-14 after that. His final numbers were 18-of-24 for 136 yards, two touchdowns and an interception. He was clutch early, converting a fourth-and-3 to Robby Anderson, but the Buccaneers did a much better job of not blowing coverages this week. That said, Bridgewater would've had a better stat line had D.J. Moore not dropped a 42-yard pass.

Bridgewater wasn't able to finish the game, as he exited with some concern to his knee. It's unclear how severe the problem is. If Bridgewater is sidelined next week, XFL all-star Phillip Walker will get the start.

Despite the drop, Moore led his team in receiving by a large margin with four catches for 96 yards and a touchdown. Anderson (4-21) was the only other Panther with more than 12 receiving yards.

Mike Davis was a disappointment as a replacement for Christian McCaffrey. Missing about a quarter of action with a thumb concern, Davis mustered 32 yards on seven carries, and he caught four passes for 12 receiving yards. The Buccaneers have the NFL's best run defense, so Davis' struggles should've been expected.

Colts 34, Titans 17

NFL analysts tend to focus on offense and defense, but this was a game decided by special teams. Indianapolis dominated on fourth down in this pivotal divisional matchup, particularly in the second half.

The Titans had the lead, 17-13, when punter Trevor Daniel shanked a punt off his foot. The ball spiraled out of bounds at the Tennessee 30-yard line. The Colts converted the short field into a Nyheim Hines touchdown, taking the lead for the first time all night. Daniel took the field at the conclusion of the next drive, only to see this punt blocked and returned for six. Now trailing by 10, the Titans finally put together a quality drive, but stalled near the red zone. Stephen Gostkowski, however, whiffed on his eighth field goal of the year, a 44-yarder. The Titans could have trimmed the deficit to seven, but the Colts hung on to their double-digit advantage and even expanded it on the ensuing possession.

Philip Rivers did well to bounce back from last week's dreadful performance. Rivers couldn't do anything against the Ravens, but was far better versus Tennessee. It helped, of course, that T.Y. Hilton was on the field for a change. Hilton didn't even do much statistically, but his presence on the field forced the Titans to respect the deep ball, despite Rivers' diminished arm strength.

Rivers finished 29-of-39 for 308 yards and a touchdown. He did a great job of moving the chains, as his team didn't even punt until three minutes remained in regulation. Rivers made a couple of mistakes when he nearly fired an interception (Malcolm Butler was able to get just one foot inbounds) and hesitated to throw the ball to a couple of his targets for potential touchdowns, but this was a positive outcome overall.

As for Hilton, he was third on the team in receiving with four catches for 40 yards. He finished behind promising rookie Michael Pittman, who snatched seven balls for 101 yards, and Hines, who reeled in five of his six targets for 45 yards and a receiving touchdown.

In addition to scoring aurally, Hines also reached the end zone on the ground. He was the best of the Colts' three running backs, and it wasn't even close. Hines gained 70 yards on 12 carries to go along with the two touchdowns. He was nimble and elusive, making a case that he deserves to handle the majority of the workload. He greatly outclassed apparent bust Jonathan Taylor (7-12) and Jordan Wilkins (8-28), both of whom were stuffed at the goal line on a drive. Hines scored in the same situation on the next possession.

Naturally, the game's leading rusher was Derrick Henry, who pummeled through Indianapolis' great rush defense for some tough yards. He tallied 103 yards on just 19 attempts, and he had a gain of 20 negated by a penalty. Henry was certainly not to blame for this loss.

Ryan Tannehill, conversely, didn't do as well, at least on paper. Tannehill was just 15-of-27 for 147 yards and a touchdown. He missed some throws he should have made, but he was robbed of a deep touchdown to A.J. Brown, who committed a terrible drop.

Speaking of Brown, this was a nightmare game for him. He caught only one pass for 21 yards, yet he was guilty of two drops, one of which would've gone for a 78-yard touchdown. Despite his poor numbers, Brown still finished second on Tennessee in receiving, only behind Corey Davis (5-67), who lost his older brother to cancer this week.

Lions 30, Redskins 27

I have been pleading for Matt Patricia to "Get Swifty," as in to allow D'Andre Swift to handle much more of a workload over the decrepit Adrian Peterson. It took Patricia way too long, but he finally came to his senses when he named Swift the starting running back over Peterson in this contest.

Swift instantly rewarded his coach. He ripped off some nice runs on the opening drive, including a 16-yard scamper in which he hurdled over an opponent. With the Redskins worried about Swift, Matthew Stafford capitalized by throwing a 55-yard touchdown bomb to Marvin Hall to open up a quick lead.

The Lions didn't have to do anything after that, as the Redskins constantly self-destructed with dumb mistakes once again. Alex Smith took a sack to get knocked out of field goal range. Smith missed a wide-open J.D. McKissic for a touchdown. Dustin Hopkins whiffed on a 43-yard field goal. Terry McLaurin lost a fumble right outside the red zone. All of this, by the way, was in the first half alone! The result was the Lions taking a 17-3 lead into intermission.

Detroit actually led 24-3, thanks to some other great Swift runs. It looked like the Redskins had no hope, but the Lions once again reverted to their habit of blowing leads. Smith engineered three touchdown drives to tie the game, but the defense couldn't get a stop after that. Stafford took possession with just 16 seconds remaining in regulation, and yet he somehow drove into field goal range, setting up Matt Prater with a 59-yard attempt. Prater nailed the kick, giving the Lions their fourth victory of the season.

Stafford finished 24-of-33 for 276 yards and three touchdowns. This was an impressive showing, given that Stafford was down his top receiver (Kenny Golladay) and an offensive lineman (Halapoulou Vaitai), all while battling a stout Redskin pass defense. Stafford struggled in the third quarter, but came through in the clutch.

Swift, as referenced earlier, had a tremendous first game as a starter. He rushed for 81 yards on 16 carries to go along with five catches for 68 receiving yards and a touchdown. Adrian Peterson (4-21) didn't get much work. It's amazing that it took Patricia this long to figure out that he needs to feed Swift as many touches as possible, but given that the Lions are still in position to reach the playoffs, it's better late than never.

The only Detroit player with more receiving yards than Swift was Marvin Jones, who had a nice game, catching eight of his 10 targets for 96 yards and a touchdown. Hall (2-61) also scored. T.J. Hockenson (2-13) was a disappointment.

Jones edged out McLaurin as the receiving leader in this game by a single yard, as McLaurin's seven receptions went for 95 yards. He drew an interference flag on the Redskins' final offensive drive, but the penalty was complete nonsense.

Elsewhere in the Redskins' receiving corps, Logan Thomas (4-66), Isaiah Wright (6-59), Cam Sims (4-54) and Steven Sims (5-46) all contributed.

Smith finished with a big stat line, going 38-of-55 for 390 yards. Don't be fooled by this, as Smith wasn't very good. He spent the afternoon dinking and dunking, but had to throw a lot because of the huge deficit. Smith is very limited, and his mobility is gone because of his broken leg.

Gibson had a nice fantasy day despite the deficit. This was because of his two touchdowns on 13 carries for 45 yards. He also caught four balls for 20 receiving yards. McKissic, meanwhile, had seven catches for 43 receiving yards, thanks to Smith's checkdown habits. McKissic had an adventurous game. He dropped a touchdown, but Smith missed him for a score. Smith also didn't see an open McKissic inside the 10-yard line for an opportunity that could have been a touchdown.

Packers 24, Jaguars 20

The Packers were set to battle the Colts in the upcoming game, so they didn't have anything to look forward to next week. Yet, they were unexpectedly sluggish in this game. They allowed the Jaguars to score on a kickoff return, and they also had some mental mistakes to negate big plays. Two of those instances were Davante Adams catches, including one touchdown. The Packers could have led 28-3 entering intermission had they avoided their blunders. Instead, they were up just 17-10 at the break, as the Jake Luton-quarterbacked Jaguars still had a chance.

The Jaguars inexplicably took the lead in the second half, as an Adams fumble turned into a quick Jacksonville touchdown. However, Adams redeemed himself in the final quarter, catching the game-winning touchdown pass to put the Jaguars away in a game that was much closer than it should have been.

The weather was severe in Green Bay, which would explain a much lower output for Green Bay than expected. Still, despite scoring just 24 points, Aaron Rodgers had a strong fantasy performance. He went 24-of-34 for 325 yards, two touchdowns and an interception. He also scored on the ground.

Close to half of Rodgers' yardage went to Marquez Valdes-Scantling. The deep threat somehow came down with four catches for 149 yards and a touchdown despite the heavy winds. This had to be a very tilting outcome for those who have played Valdes-Scantling in previous weeks, only to see him not do anything. Adams, meanwhile, caught eight of his 12 targets for 66 yards and a touchdown, but would have secured two touchdowns if it wasn't for Billy Turner's holding penalty.

Speaking of tilting fantasy outcomes, Aaron Jones didn't see many more carries than Jamaal Williams, 13-8. Jones outgained Williams, 46-30. Jones caught five passes for 49 receiving yards, but Williams was also a big part of the passing game with three catches for 25 receiving yards. The Packers did this last year, using Jones less often than usual versus horrible teams they should beat easily.

Because Jones and Williams split touches, James Robinson had the most rushing yards of anyone in this contest. He abused the Packers' poor run defense, gaining 109 yards on 23 carries, despite the fact that the Packers had the luxury of placing extra men in the box. Robinson also appeared to score twice, but had both touchdowns negated by penalties.

The Packers didn't take Luton seriously, and rightfully so. Luton barely completed half of his passes, going 18-of-35 for 169 yards, one touchdown and an interception that occurred when his receiver fell down. Luton was fortunate to get away with a couple of other picks, but the Packer defenders were guilty of some drops. Luton's accuracy was woeful in this game.

With Jaire Alexander sidelined, D.J. Chark didn't have to deal with tough coverage. Chark led the team in receiving, but with only four catches for 56 yards. Keelan Cole (5-47) caught a touchdown, but dropped a pass in addition to his kickoff return score.

Giants 27, Eagles 17

Carson Wentz has regressed tremendously this year, but there was a chance he'd rebound in an easy matchup this week. Given that the Eagles were coming off a bye and were getting some players back from injury, there was plenty of optimism for Philadelphia. In fact, the sharp bettors wagered on Philadelphia aggressively, taking the line from -3 to -5 prior to kickoff.

And yet, it was the same, old Wentz that we saw struggle in the first half of this year. Wentz was putrid despite the favorable matchup, as he constantly overshot his receivers. He was seeing lots of pressure, as usual, but it doesn't excuse the poor accuracy he maintained throughout this contest, which featured countless sloppy mistakes by the Eagles, who did not take advantage of their bye.

Wentz's inability to keep drives alive allowed the Giants to establish an early, double-digit lead, as Daniel Jones outperformed his counterpart by a wide margin. While Wentz had difficulty locating his targets, Jones was very precise, completing all but four of his 17 passes in the opening half. The Giants took a 14-3 lead into the locker room, and while the Eagles made things interesting for a while, thanks to a big run, the Giants were able to pull away with a double-digit victory.

Wentz had a miserable stat line, going 21-of-37 for 208 yards. This was a horrible outcome in a good matchup. As mentioned, Wentz saw lots of pressure, but he should be playing much better than he is. The Eagles will be stuck with him for one more year, but if he doesn't improve, the team will need to find a new quarterback following the 2021 season.

The Eagles were able to keep this game close because of Boston Scott's 56-yard touchdown run in the second half. That's all Scott did, as Miles Sanders (15-85) handled most of the workload. Sanders didn't get a touchdown, but scored on a two-point conversion.

Despite the return of Alshon Jeffery, the emergence of Travis Fulgham and the improved health of Dallas Goedert, the Eagles' leader in receiving yardage was Richard Rodgers, who caught four balls for 60 yards. Jalen Reagor (4-47) was next. Jeffery didn't catch a single pass, while Fulgham came up with just one grab for eight yards. Goedert (4-33) was a disappointment.

Meanwhile, Jones misfired on just seven passes, showing improvement that lacked earlier in the season. Jones went 21-of-28 for 244 yards. He did lots of damage on the ground, scrambling nine times for 64 rushing yards and a touchdown.

Darius Slayton was the Giants' leading receiver by a wide margin, making five grabs for 93 yards despite missing most of the first quarter with a shoulder injury. Sterling Shepard (6-47) was next on the stat sheet.

Despite the Eagles being strong against the run, Wayne Gallman had a nice fantasy output because of two rushing touchdowns. Gallman mustered 53 yards on 16 attempts otherwise.

Browns 10 Texans 7

Did you benefit from Nick Chubb's non-touchdown, or were you hurt by it? Both for me! I had the Texans against the spread in an office pool, so I was happy for the win. However, I played Chubb in many DraftKings lineups, so I could have used the extra 6.1 points.

The Browns improved to 6-3, thanks their defense and rushing attack overwhelming the Texans. Cleveland's defense dominated the line of scrimmage, with Myles Garrett harassing Deshaun Watson and Houston's anemic rushing offense failing to support its quarterback. The Browns remains in the playoff race, while the Texans just look like their next head coach and general manger will have to perform a massive overhaul, thanks to a roster Bill O'Brien left devoid of talent.

Cleveland got moving on the opening drive with Nick Chubb and Kareem Hunt running through the Houston defense thanks to some pathetic tackling attempts. The Browns settled for a field goal, but they held that 3-0 lead until the fourth quarter. After trading punts, Watson got the Texans close to the end zone with completions to Will Fuller (5-38) and Jordan Akins, helped by a good run from Duke Johnson. However on fourth-and-goal, Garrett snuffed out a quarterback draw for a loss. Late in the first half, Baker Mayfield returned the favor on a fourth down, making an inaccurate throw when he had Jarvis Landry (3-29) open downfield inside the 10-yard line, and that left points on the field for the Browns.

Watson led a drive into Cleveland territory in the third quarter, but Ka'imi Fairbairn missed a 46-yard field goal. In the fourth quarter, Mayfield converted a third-and-18 with a pass to Rashard Higgins, and pass interference on Vernon Hargreaves converted another third down. Chubb finished the drive by charging into the end zone.

Houston finally got moving when Watson made a tremendous pass to Randall Cobb for 29 yards. A few plays later, Watson connected with Pharaoh Brown for a 16-yard touchdown to cut the Browns' lead to 10-7. Cleveland executed its 4-minute offense to perfection, using some runs by Chubb and a 19-yard run by Hunt to drain the clock. With under a minute remaining, Chubb exploded down the field, and he could have scored on a 60-yard play, but he wisely stepped out of bounds at the 1-yard line. That let Cleveland take a knee twice to clinch the win and not give the ball back to Watson.

Mayfield was 12-of-20 for 132 yards. He missed some open receivers on some key plays, but he avoided turnovers and big mistakes.

Chubb (19-126-1) and Hunt (19-104) were phenomenal, combining with their defense to control the game. Rashard Higgins (3-48) led the Browns in receiving. Watson was 20-of-30 for 163 yards with a touchdown while running for 36 yards on eight carries. Duke Johnson (14-54) led the Texans in rushing, and their ground offense continued to give proof why it is among the worst in the NFL. Randall Cobb (3-41) led Houston in receiving.

Steelers 36, Bengals 10

Joe Burrow has played very well in most games this year, but he's gotten wrecked by the two elite defenses he has played so far. He needs plenty of help.

Color analyst Jonathan Vilma said "this was an all-around butt whipping for Cincinnati," effectively summarizing this game in a nutshell. The Bengals were dominated in all three phases - offense, defense, and special teams - while the Steelers cruised to a home victory to remain unbeaten and improve to 9-0 for the first time in franchise history. Cincinnati improved its draft positioning with the loss, which is ultimately more important than meaningless wins down the stretch.

Early in the first quarter, the Steelers' special teams took the ball away with a fumble recovery on a punt return by Adam Erickson. Pittsburgh turned that opportunity into a field goal. The Steelers would tack on another field goal before Ben Roethlisberger hit Diontae Johnson for a 46-yard completion, presaging that the duo would connect for a 12-yard touchdown a few plays later. On Cincinnati's ensuing possession, Tee Higgins was stripped of the ball, and Stephen Nelson recovered the ball near midfield for the Steelers, but the Cincinnati defense forced a punt.

Higgins bounced back to get open for a 54-yard gain to end up deep in Pittsburgh territory. On fourth-and-goal, Burrow connected with Higgins for a short touchdown. The Steelers responded with Roethlisberger using JuJu Smith-Schuster (9-77-1) for a few receptions, including an eight-yard score. A 24-yard pass to Eric Ebron led to another Pittsburgh field goal and a 22-7 lead at the half.

In the third quarter, Roethlisberger led a drive to open up a 22-point lead after a short touchdown pass to Chase Claypool (4-56-2). Pittsburgh's Ray-Ray McCloud returned a punt 45 yards early in the fourth quarter, finishing up close to the end zone, and from there, Roethlisberger tossed his fourth score, hooking up with Claypool again.

Roethlisberger completed 27-of-46 passes for 333 yards with four touchdowns. James Conner (13-36) and the Pittsburgh rushing offense were held in check. Diontae Johnson led Pittsburgh with six receptions for 116 yards and a touchdown.

Burrow was 21-of-40 for 213 yards with a touchdown. Samaje Perine (7-48) led Cincinnati in rushing. Higgins caught seven passes for 115 yards and a touchdown.

Raiders 37, Broncos 12

The Raiders entered this game missing three starting offensive linemen: Trent Brown, Kolton Miller and Richie Incognito. While the Broncos couldn't fully take advantage of this because they were missing their entire starting defensive line, it was still expected to be a challenge for the Raiders, as Denver's defense still has loads of talent.

The Raiders opened the game with a beautiful touchdown drive, but struggled a bit after that, entering halftime with just a 10-6 lead. Derek Carr, however, eventually got into a rhythm and was able to open up a multi-score lead despite multiple dropped touchdowns. It helped, of course, that his counterpart was extremely inept, offering no threat to a Raider defense that isn't exactly an imposing unit.

Carr went 16-of-25 for 154 yards. The stats weren't pretty, but Carr saw two potential touchdowns that were dropped. This matchup wasn't easy either, as Denver had two of its starting cornerbacks back from injury. Bryce Callahan made a number of nice plays.

Of course, it helped that the Raiders were able to lean on their running game, as Josh Jacobs rumbled for 112 yards and two touchdowns on 21 carries versus a defense missing its entire front line. He also caught four passes for 24 receiving yards. Jacobs owners had to be pleased with this result, though his owners have to feel salty that Devontae Booker was able to pick up some great stats (16-81, 2 TDs) late in the game when the Raiders were running out the clock in a blowout.

Darren Waller, who dropped one of the potential Carr touchdowns, led the Raiders with three grabs for 37 yards. Henry Ruggs (3-31) was next on the stat sheet. Ruggs dropped a deep pass, so his stats should've been better.

Drew Lock, as mentioned, was dreadful. He once again continued his habit of needlessly drifting backward in the pocket, even when not seeing any pressure. This resulted in many poor throws, four of which were interceptions. The first pick was an overthrow into triple coverage. The second was the result of Lock's decision to force the issue into heavy coverage. The third was a heave while drifting backward under heavy pressure. The fourth was a desperation throw in garbage time.

Lock also had some misfortune as well. He rushed in a touchdown when the game was close in the opening half, but that play was negated by a hold. On the very next play, Lock tossed his second interception. Had the play stood, the Broncos would've entered halftime with a 13-10 lead instead of a 10-6 deficit.

Lock finished 23-of-47 for 257 yards, one touchdown and the quartet of picks. Some of his other lowlights include: missing Jerry Jeudy for a touchdown; nearly getting DaeSean Hamilton killed on a poor throw off his back foot; and a fumble on a strip-sack right near his own goal line that he was able to recover.

Jeudy won't reach his full potential until the Broncos have a real quarterback. Still, he led the team with four catches for 68 yards. As mentioned, he should've scored a touchdown, but Lock overthrew him. Tim Patrick (4-61) and K.J. Hamler (4-50) were close, with the former being ejected for fighting with Raider cornerback Isaiah Johnson in the second half.

The Broncos got nothing out of their running game, as Melvin Gordon (11-46) and Phillip Lindsay (4-2) couldn't run very much in the second half. Gordon's best run was an 8-yard burst in which he broke three tackles.

Dolphins 29, Chargers 21

Tua Tagovailoa's ugly debut against the Rams seems like a million years ago, doesn't it? Tagovailoa improved last week in Arizona and was mostly solid once again this week against the other Los Angeles defense. With Tagovailoa performing well, and the Dolphins' special teams and defense dominating with big plays, the team was able to cruise to an easy victory to improve to 6-3.

Tagovailoa went 15-of-25 for 169 yards and two touchdowns, as he once again displayed his precise accuracy while on the move. He was robbed of a third potential score when there was a botched snap fumble in the red zone. Tagovailoa was lucky to not throw a couple of interceptions, but he should continue to improve, and his upside will give the Dolphins a chance to become a Super Bowl threat as early as 2021.

Tagovailoa's leading receiver also caught the first touchdown of this game, as Jakeem Grant (4-43, TD) made the most of his opportunity to start in place of an injured Preston Williams. DeVante Parker (2-31), meanwhile, was a disappointment despite seeing seven targets. He appeared to score a touchdown at one point, but replay review overturned it.

Speaking of injured Dolphins, with Myles Gaskin and Matt Breida sidelined, a rookie named Salvon Ahmed started and did a great job. Ahmed tallied 85 yards and a touchdown on 21 attempts.

Tagovailoa outshined his top-six rookie counterpart, as Justin Herbert took a step backward against a tough defense. Herbert's accuracy wasn't there, and he telegraphed an interception in a close game, as the pick gave Miami a 13-point lead in the second half. This, along with a blocked punt, aided the Dolphins greatly in their victory.

Herbert finished 20-of-32 for 187 yards and two touchdowns to go along with 10 rushing yards and a third score on the ground. Despite the meager passing stats, much of what Herbert did was in garbage time, as he had just 83 yards in the opening half.

Keenan Allen caught the ultimate garbage-time touchdown, though he's lucky he wasn't called for fumbling the ball for a touchback. Allen led the team in receiving with three catches for 39 yards, as the Dolphins eliminated him from the game plan by constantly sending double teams his way. Hunter Henry (4-30) also got a late touchdown. Mike Williams (2-38) should have scored, but Herbert missed him badly in the end zone.

Kalen Ballage tried to get revenge against his former team. He did very well, rushing for 68 yards on 18 carries to go along with five catches for 34 receiving yards. He also had some nice blitz pick-ups.

Cardinals 32, Bills 30

Wow, what a finish! The Cardinals appeared to be in control of this game when, up a field goal, they intercepted Josh Allen with a few minutes remaining in regulation. However, following a three-and-out in which the Cardinals inexplicably passed twice, the Bills were given one more chance. Josh Allen made the most of it, moving the chains well, albeit with some help via an incredible catch by Cole Beasley along the sideline. The Bills got into the red zone and had a sure field goal to tie, but Allen went for it all, connecting with Stefon Diggs, who made a sliding touchdown grab that appeared to win the game.

The Cardinals still had a sliver of hope with 37 seconds and two timeouts remaining. They moved the ball to midfield when Kyler Murray took the snap, spun away from an apparent sack and launched the ball into the end zone while falling down. There was only one Arizona player surrounded by three Buffalo defenders, but that one Arizona player was DeAndre Hopkins, who skied over the trio of Bills to secure an inexplicable, game-winning touchdown.

With the win, the Cardinals have not only improved to 6-3, but moved into first place in the division in the wake of Seattle's loss to the Rams. The Cardinals will meet the Seahawks in the rematch on Thursday night.

Murray was incredible on the final drive and at various other points in the second half. He had some issues early - he saw an interception dropped and accumulated only 102 yards in the opening half - but he made a strong case for him to win MVP with his play late in the afternoon.

Murray finished 22-of-32 for 245 yards, one touchdown and an interception that was thrown behind Larry Fitzgerald. He was magical as a runner, scrambling 11 times for 61 yards and two other scores.

The other hero of the game, Hopkins snatched seven passes for 127 yards and a touchdown. It's still amazing that the Cardinals were able to obtain him for a decrepit running back and a second-round pick. Die-hard Cardinal fans should put Bill O'Brien on their Christmas card list.

Hopkins outgained all other Arizona players by a wide margin, as Dan Arnold (4-34) was next on the stat sheet. Christian Kirk (4-27) was a big disappointment as a fantasy player, considering that the Bills were down several defensive backs. Kirk drew an interference flag, but that didn't help his owners.

Kenyan Drake got the start after a brief hiatus. He rushed for an even 100 yards on 16 carries, but lost a fumble in the third quarter to set up a quick Buffalo touchdown. Drake did nothing in the passing game, save for catching a 9-yard pass.

Meanwhile, it seemed like Allen would come away with a tremendous victory, but wasn't as fortunate. Still, he was great on the final drive, so that shouldn't be forgotten. That said, Allen made one too many mistakes earlier in the second half, including one interception that was a terrible decision, as he fired into tight coverage toward Patrick Peterson.

Allen went 32-of-49 for 284 yards, two touchdowns and a pair of interceptions. He also scrambled seven times for 38 yards and caught a receiving touchdown from Isaiah McKenzie on a trick play. It should be noted that Allen was fortunate to have some potential picks dropped, including two from Peterson.

Diggs and Beasley both had huge performances, with Diggs catching 10 passes for 93 yards and Beasley securing 11 balls for 109 yards. Both reeled in touchdowns. John Brown didn't score, but was able to catch six passes for 72 yards despite having a 24-yard reception on a third-and-23 negated by a penalty.

Devin Singletary was barely seen once again. Zack Moss had three more carries, 7-4, and he outgained Singletary, 20-15.

Rams 23, Seahawks 16

Russell Wilson has maintained a pristine record off a loss, but he certainly did not play like that in this game. Pressure was an issue for him - Leonard Floyd had a monstrous afternoon - but Wilson made some mental mistakes that were very uncharacteristic of him.

One such example of this occurred when the Seahawks obtained possession following a Jared Goff lost fumble. Wilson had a wide-open field in front of him, with only one defender remotely in position to potentially make a tackle before Wilson ran into the end zone. Instead of running for a possible score, Wilson fired a pass across his body that was intercepted in the end zone. Later, Wilson inexplicably was flagged for a delay of game on a crucial third-and-4. Wilson's third-and-9 ended in disaster, as he launched a second interception on a telegraphed pass.

The FOX announcers agreed with the sentiment that Wilson lacked focus. "He's not totally in tune with what's happening in this game," Troy Aikman said when Wilson failed to run out of bounds during a 2-minute drill.

Wilson didn't even manage to reach 250 passing yards, and he failed to trim the margin to three at the end, which is something he would normally do. Granted, he was battling an elite defense, but Wilson made some strange mental errors that are unheard of from him. He also missed throws, including a potential touchdown to an open Freddie Swain in the second quarter and another possible score to D.K. Metcalf, which would have trimmed the margin to 23-20 at the beginning of the fourth quarter. Wilson later had Metcalf available for about a 17-yard gain along the sideline, but led his receiver too far out of bounds.

Wilson struggled to connect with Metcalf. The elite receiver has gotten open against Stephon Gilmore and Tre'Davious White, but he was no match for Jalen Ramsey, who limited Metcalf to just two receptions for 28 yards. Instead, Wilson had to focus on throwing to Tyler Lockett (5-66), Swain (3-37) and Greg Olsen (2-33).

DeeJay Dallas was expected to handle the majority of the workload. Instead, it was Alex Collins, who rumbled for 43 yards and a touchdown on 11 attempts.

The Rams, meanwhile, moved into a three-way tie with this win, but this was a Pyrrhic victory for them. Perennial Pro Bowl left tackle Andrew Whitworth was carted off the field just prior to halftime with what looked like a season-ending injury. Goff needs elite protection to thrive, and he won't have that anymore with Whitworth sidelined.

Goff played well for most of this game, at least until Whitworth left the field. Goff went 27-of-37 for 302 yards and the lost fumble, which was the result of him holding on to the ball too long, allowing Jamal Adams to strip it out of his hand. Goff moved the chains well in between the 20s, especially off play-action, and then the Rams leaned on their running game in the red zone.

Speaking of which, Malcolm Brown scored twice, but rushed for 33 yards on six carries. Darrell Henderson (7-28) also found the end zone, while Cam Akers (10-38) led the team in rushing. It's anyone's guess as to what Sean McVay will do with his running back rotation on any given week.

Neither Cooper Kupp (5-50) nor Robert Woods (5-33) led the Rams in receiving. Instead, it was Josh Reynolds, who secured eight catches for 94 yards despite dropping a pass.

Saints 27, 49ers 13

The Saints won to improve to 7-2, but that doesn't matter if Drew Brees' injury is severe. Brees took a rough hit and landed hard on his side in the second quarter. He remained in the game until halftime, but he wasn't healthy enough to keep playing in the third quarter. Already nursing some sort of shoulder injury, Brees could miss some action.

If Brees is out, Jameis Winston will get his opportunity. Winston went 6-of-10 for 63 yards (Brees was 8-of-13, 76 yards, TD), and he made a couple of nice throws, including one in the red zone where he showed nice touch on a pass to Alvin Kamara. However, he also whiffed badly on two attempts when targeting Michael Thomas, one of which nearly resulted in an interception. Winston also took a dumb sack on second-and-goal to move outside of the 10-yard line, but was bailed out by a face mask penalty by San Francisco on the next play to give him a fresh set of downs.

Given the Saints' struggles at quarterback, it was a miracle that they won by two touchdowns. With that in mind, San Francisco's repeated miscues on special teams might constitute as a miracle. The 49ers muffed two punts in this game, setting up a pair of touchdowns for the Saints. Otherwise, this game may have gone down to the wire.

Nick Mullens did not play very well. He had some nice moments - he misfired just five times on his 18 passes in the first half, accumulating 134 yards and a touchdown - but he fell apart in the second half. He threw two picks following halftime, including one where he simply didn't see Malcolm Jenkins. That pick was a killer because the 49ers were down just 17-10 and in field goal range to potentially trim the margin to four.

Mullens finished 24-of-38 for 247 yards, one touchdown and two interceptions. This was not a pretty showing, as Mullens was even removed from the game on one third-and-21 in the final quarter because he didn't have the arm strength to make the necessary throw. Hilariously, his brief replacement, C.J. Beathard was nearly picked on an underthrow, but the Saints dropped the potential turnover.

Brandon Aiyuk was the only top weapon available for the 49ers, and he made the most out of this opportunity. He caught seven passes for 75 yards and a touchdown. He barely eclipsed Jordan Reed (5-62), who made an amazing catch when he scooped a ball up that almost grazed the ground.

Jerick McKinnon was given the majority of the workload, but he struggled against the Saints' strong run defense. He was limited to 33 yards on 18 carries. He caught just one pass for 13 receiving yards.

McKinnon was outgained by both Latavius Murray (9-57) and Alvin Kamara (8-15). Kamara had a disappointing rushing yardage total, but he found the end zone three times, all while catching seven passes for 83 receiving yards. He also had a reception of about 20 yards negated because of offensive pass interference.

Save for Kamara, Michael Thomas was the Saints' leading receiver, but with only two catches for 27 yards. Thomas struggled with Brees hurt and Winston errant on two passes.

Patriots 23, Ravens 17

The Ravens couldn't lose this game if they wanted a good chance to win the division. With the Steelers improving to 9-0, Baltimore had to prevail to stay within two games of their arch rival. Instead, the Ravens fell to the Patriots in a torrential downpour.

The lost division is only part of the concern for the Ravens, who are suddenly stricken with injuries. Already down Calais Campbell and Jimmy Smith, the Ravens lost Brandon Williams and some others in this contest. Williams' absence made it very difficult for them to stop the run. The Patriots took advantage of this liability by ramming the ball down Baltimore's throat. They accumulated 173 rushing yards, as Cam Newton, Damien Harris and Rex Burkhead trampled the Ravens.

Newton had the fewest rushing yards of the three, but had some clutch scrambles, including his rushing touchdowns. Newton picked up 21 yards and the score on 11 scrambles to go along with his passing that featured nice accuracy. Newton went 13-of-17 for 118 yards and another touchdown.

Damien Harris led New England with 121 yards on 22 tries. He was excellent yet again. He missed a bit of action with an injury, but was able to return to the game without being sidelined for too long. Harris didn't score, but Rex Burkhead did. Burkhead tallied 31 yards on six attempts, and he also caught four passes for 35 receiving yards and a pair of touchdowns.

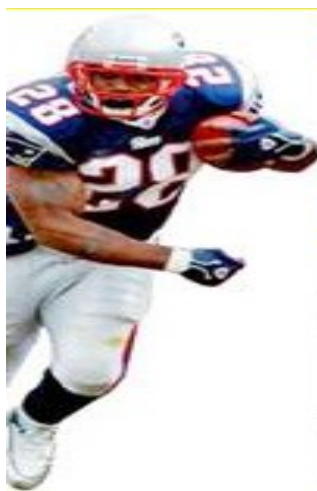

Jakobi Meyers continued to play well. His opportunities were limited by the heavy rain, but he still was able to catch five passes for 59 yards. He and Burkhead were the only Patriots with more than 20 receiving yards.

Lamar Jackson, meanwhile, had a dreadful game. The stats don't exactly show it - 24-of-34, 249 yards, two touchdowns, one interception; 11 scrambles, 55 rushing yards - but Jackson made a high number of mistakes. He made a dumb decision right before halftime when he launched an interception while in field goal range on an underthrown pass. He was fortunate not to throw a second pick when he fired a ball right to a New England player with no teammate in sight.

To be fair, Jackson and his center had some major issues with the weather. There were multiple botched snaps between the two, which ruined some potential scoring drives. One snap mishap was on fourth down. Center Matt Skura really struggled in the downpour.

Both of Jackson's touchdowns went to Willie Snead, who caught five passes for 64 yards otherwise. Mark Andrews (7-61) was next, and he actually had a solid output, given how well New England tends to play against tight ends. Marquise Brown (2-14) was nowhere to be found.

Save for Jackson, Gus Edwards led the Ravens in rushing with 42 yards on seven carries, while J.K. Dobbins gained 13 yards on five tries. Neither of them started, giving way to Mark Ingram, who looked like a rotting corpse with his five carries and five yards.

Detroit + 3 Over Carolina by 4

Detroit at Carolina Over 45 Total by 13

The Detroit Lions look for a big road victory after splitting their last eight games. The Detroit Lions have won three of their last four road games. Matthew Stafford is completing 63.7 percent of his passes for 2,403 yards, 17 touchdowns and seven interceptions. Stafford has seven touchdown passes in his last three games. Danny Amendola and Marvin Jones Jr. have combined for 815 receiving yards and five touchdowns while TJ Hockenson has 36 receptions. The Detroit Lions ground game is averaging 101.6 yards per contest, and Adrian Peterson leads the way with 371 yards and two touchdowns. Defensively, Detroit is allowing 29.7 points and 400 yards per game. Jamie Collins Sr. leads the Detroit Lions with 68 tackles, Romeo Okwara has six sacks and Duron Harmon has two interceptions.

The Carolina Panthers need a victory here in order to snap a five-game losing streak. The Carolina Panthers have lost three straight home games. Teddy Bridgewater is completing 72.1 percent of his passes for 2,552 yards, 13 touchdowns and seven interceptions. Bridgewater has two touchdown passes in five of his last seven games. Robby Anderson and DJ Moore have combined for 1,508 receiving yards and five touchdowns while Curtis Samuel has 41 receptions. The Carolina Panthers ground game is averaging 105.4 yards per contest, and Mike Davis leads the way with 385 yards and two touchdowns. Defensively, Carolina is allowing 27.2 points and 380 yards per game. Shaq Thompson leads the Carolina Panthers with 79 tackles, Brian Burns has four sacks and Donte Jackson has three interceptions.

Will update with trends once they're released.

The Detroit Lions continue to struggle defensively, but they continue to find ways to win games and they've done some of their best work on the road. The Carolina Panthers are riding a five-game losing streak and have allowed 25 or more points in each of their last four games. This is likely going to be a high scoring game, with little defensive stops, hence the over the total selection. Furthermore, we're getting free points with the better team opposed to laying chalk with a team that's lost five straight doesn't seem ideal. Detroit is 5-2 ATS in its last 7 games when playing Carolina. The total has gone OVER in 4 of Detroit's last 6 games when playing Carolina This is double play. Give me the Lions and the free field goal, and the over 45.

Projected Score: Detroit 31, Carolina 27

New Orleans - 4½ Over Atlanta by 11

The Atlanta Falcons are coming off a bye week and have a chance at a third straight victory. The Atlanta Falcons have split their last four road games. Matt Ryan is completing 67.2 percent of his passes for 2,746 yards, 15 touchdowns and five interceptions. Ryan has one or less touchdown passes in five of his last seven games. Calvin Ridley and Julio Jones have combined for 1,295 receiving yards and nine touchdowns while Hayden Hurst has 37 receptions. The Atlanta Falcons ground game is averaging 106.8 yards per contest, and Todd Gurley II leads the way with 584 yards and nine touchdowns. Defensively, Atlanta is allowing 27.9 points and 410 yards per game. Foyesade Oluokun leads the Atlanta Falcons with 64 tackles, Grady Jarrett has 2.5 sacks and Blidi Wreh-Wilson has two interceptions.

The New Orleans Saints look to pad their NFC South lead while adding to their six-game winning streak. The New Orleans Saints have won four of their last five home games. Drew Brees is completing 73.5 percent of his passes for 2,196 yards, 18 touchdowns and three interceptions. Brees has two or more touchdown passes in 10 of his last 13 games. Alvin Kamara and Emmanuel Sanders have combined for 995 receiving yards and seven touchdowns while Tre'Quan Smith has 26 receptions. The New Orleans Saints ground game is averaging 120.8 yards per contest, and Kamara leads the way with 486 yards and seven touchdowns. Defensively, New Orleans is allowing 23.7 points and 308.2 yards per game. Demario Davis leads the New Orleans Saints with 59 tackles, Trey Hendrickson has 7.5 sacks and Marcus Williams has two interceptions.

The Atlanta Falcons are playing their best football of the season right now and have had an extra week to prepare for this contest. The New Orleans Saints have improved drastically defensively over the last month and are riding a solid six-game winning streak. The issue here is the Falcons three wins have come against teams with a combined 9-18 record, so I question if this team has truly turned the corner. Also, the Saints have won six of the last 10 meetings against the Falcons and have covered seven of those contests. A concerning trend is that Atlanta is 7-1 ATS in its last 8 games on the road. Yes, I know Drew Brees is out with rib injuries, but I have confidence in Tayson Hill running RPO's if Winston falters. I need to see the Falcons put together a solid 60 minutes against a top tier team before I have confidence in them in games like this.

I'll take my chances with the Saints by a touchdown.

Projected Score: New Orleans 31, Atlanta 20

Pittsburgh - 9½ Over Jacksonville by 19

Pittsburgh rolls into this one at 9-0 on the 2020 NFL season. The Steelers have taken out the Ravens, Cowboys and Bengals in their last three games. As for Jacksonville, they're sitting at 1-8 so far. The Jaguars are on an eight-game losing streak right now, most recently falling to the Packers last weekend. They played the Packers real tough last week while showing some fight.

There's not a whole lot to complain about when it comes to the Steelers this season; that undefeated record is pretty great. Pittsburgh has had a few close shaves however, beating the Titans 27-24, the Ravens 28-24 and the Cowboys 24-19 in the span of three games. That said, Pitt didn't have that much trouble with the Bengals last weekend on a 36-10 win.

In the victory over Cincinnati, Pittsburgh quarterback Ben Roethlisberger posted 333 yards with four touchdowns, and James Connor led the rush with 36 yards on 13 carries. Diontae Johnson led the receivers in that one with six catches for 116 yards and a touchdown.

Over on the Jacksonville side, it's been a lost season already but the team has still been putting up a fight. Sure, there have been some outright blowouts like 30-14 against Houston and 34-16 against the Lions, but the Jaguars have hung tough in their last two against the Texans 27-25 and Packers 24-20.

In the loss to Green Bay, Jaguars quarterback Jake Lutton put up 169 yards, one TD and one INT, and DJ Clark led the receivers with 56 yards on four catches. James Robinson topped the rush with 109 yards on 23 carries in the losing effort.

Jacksonville is 2-5-2 ATS in their last nine games in November and 2-5 ATS in their last seven games overall. The Jaguars are 2-5 ATS in their last seven games after a straight-up loss and 1-4 ATS in their last five versus the AFC.

We have a 9-0 team coming off a 26-point win facing a 1-8 team looks pretty lopsided on paper. Luton has never seen a defense of this speed and force. That said, this is a pretty thick line and the Steelers have been making some close escapes this season against inferior opponents on the road (Dallas).

The Steelers are 5-0 ATS in their last five versus the AFC and 6-1 ATS in their last seven. Pittsburgh is 6-1 ATS in their last seven games after a straight-up win and 4-1 ATS in their last five games as a favorite. I can't justify stepping in front of the big steel locomotive. Pittsburgh should win this game by double-digits. Give me the Steelers - 9½
