RB Kyren Williams rushed for 73 yards and two touchdowns on 14 carries (5.2 ypc).

San Francisco (6-4) - QB Mac Jones completed 33/39 (85%) for 319 yards, three touchdowns, and one interception. Minnesota (4-5) - QB JJ McCarthy accounted for 296 yards (248 passing, 48 rushing), one touchdown, and two interceptions. He completed just 20/42 (48%). Seahawks beat Cardinals 44-22

Seattle (7-2) - QB Sam Darnold (10/12, 178, 1, 1) didn't have to do much. RB Zach Charbonnet rushed for 83 yards and a touchdown on 14 carries (5.9 ypc). DE Demarcus Lawrence returned two fumble recoveries for touchdowns. Both fumbles were caused by LB Tyrice Knight.

Arizona (3-6) - QB Jacoby Brissett completed just 50% of his passes and lost two fumbles in the first half. TE Trey McBride was effectively the entire offense, catching nine of 12 targets for 127 yards and a touchdown.

Bears beat Giants 24-20

Chicago (6-3) - QB Caleb Williams accounted for 283 yards (220 passing, 63 rushing), two touchdowns, and no turnovers. He completed 20/36 (56%) and overcame a ten-point fourth-quarter deficit. WR Rome Odunze caught six of ten targets for 86 yards and a touchdown. RB D'Andre Swift totaled 98 scrimmage yards (80 rushing, 18 receiving) on 18 touches (5.4 ypc).

New York (2-8) - QB Jaxson Dart's reckless style of play led to a concussion. He accounted for 298 yards (242 passing, 66 rushing), two touchdowns, and a fumble before exiting in the third quarter. WR Darius Slayton caught all four of his targets for 89 yards. RB Tyrone Tracy rushed for 71 yards on 14 carries (5.1 ypc).

Lions beat Commanders 44-22

Detroit (6-3) - QB Jared Goff was fantastic, completing 25/33 (76%) for 320 yards, three touchdowns, and no interceptions. His favorite targets were WR Jameson Williams (6-119-1) and WR Amon-Ra St. Brown (5-58-1). RB Jahmyr Gibbs exploded for 172 scrimmage yards (142 rushing, 30 receiving) and three touchdowns on 17 touches (10.1 ypt).

Washington (3-7) - QB Marcus Mariota completed 16/22 (73%) for 213 yards, two touchdowns, and no interceptions. WR Treyton Burks caught all three of his targets for 58 yards.

Texans beat Jaguars 36-29

Houston (4-5) - The Texans overcame a 19-point fourth-quarter deficit. QB Davis Mills was highly impressive, accounting for 312 yards (292 passing, 20 rushing), three touchdowns, and one interception. He completed 27/45 (60%). His favorite targets were WR Nico Collins (7-136), TE Dalton Schultz (7-53-1), and WR Jayden Higgins (5-42-1).

Jacksonville (5-4) - QB Trevor Lawrence was in poor form, completing just 13/23 (57%) for 158 yards, one touchdown, and an interception. WR Parker Washington scored two touchdowns (one receiving, one punt return). WR Jakobi Meyers caught all three of his targets for 41 yards in his Jaguars' debut.

Saints beat Panthers 17-7

New Orleans (2-8) - QB Tyler Shough showed considerable promise, completing 19/27 (70%) for 282 yards, two touchdowns, and no interceptions. His favorite targets were WR Chris Olave (5-104-1) and TE Juwan Johnson (4-92-1). RB Alvin Kamara totaled 115 scrimmage yards (83 rushing, 32 receiving) on 25 touches (4.6 ypt).

Carolina (5-5) - QB Bryce Young (17/25, 124, 0, 1) was completely ineffective. His favorite targets were WR Tet McMillan (5-60) and TE JT Sanders (5-32). RB Rico Dowdle rushed for just 53 yards on 18 carries (2.9 ypc).

Jets beat Browns 27-20

New York (2-7) - RB Breece Hall totaled 125 scrimmage yards (83 rushing, 42 receiving) and a touchdown on 22 touches (5.7 ypt). WR Garrett Wilson re-injured his knee. The Jets scored a kickoff return touchdown and a punt return touchdown.

Cleveland (2-7) - QB Dillon Gabriel (17/32, 167, 2, 0) was inaccurate (53%) and ineffective. It's clearly time to see what Shedeur Sanders can do. WR Jerry Jeudy caught six of 12 targets for 78 yards and a touchdown.

Injuries to monitor after Week 10:

Jaxson Dart's concussion could give Giants tough choice at backup QB

New York Giants QB Jaxson Dart suffered a concussion after taking a brutal hit late in the third quarter of New York's road game against the Chicago Bears. The rookie out of Ole Miss finished 19-of-29 passing for 242 yards and rushed for 66 yards and two touchdowns on 11 carries.

Giants backup QB Russell Wilson replaced an injured Dart. He completed 3-of-7 passes for 45 yards. Without its rookie signal-caller, New York failed to hold off Chicago's 14-point rally in the fourth quarter, losing 24-20.

Following the loss, Giants head coach Brian Daboll didn't commit to Wilson as the starter if Dart can't play in a Week 11 home game against the Green Bay Packers. It doesn't matter now that Daboll has been fired. The Giants also have 10th-year backup QB Jameis Winston.

Neither QB should provide much confidence for the 2-8 Giants. Wilson went 0-3 as a starter before he was benched in favor of Dart in Week 4. Winston, meanwhile, has a career starting record of 36-51.

Los Angeles Rams WR Davante Adams

During the Rams' road game against the San Francisco 49ers, Adams pulled his oblique while running a route in the fourth quarter. He then went to the locker room with a member of the team's training staff. The WR finished with six receptions for 77 yards and one TD catch.

Rams head coach Sean McVay didn't seem too concerned about Adams. Following L.A.'s 42-26 win, the coach said Adams' situation was similar to that of WR Puka Nacua last week. Nacua injured his ribs in a 34-10 Week 9 win over the New Orleans Saints and could've returned had the game been closer. He played in Week 10.

Adams' injury not seeming major is good news for the Rams. The 32-year-old wideout has reminded fans why he's still one of the top pass-catchers in the league this season. Entering Sunday, he ranked first in the league in touchdown catches, with eight in eight games.

New York Jets WR Garrett Wilson

Wilson limped off the field late in the third quarter of New York's home game against the Cleveland Browns. He suffered the injury while battling with two defenders for the ball.

After the Jets' 27-20 win, head coach Aaron Glenn confirmed that Wilson re-injured his right knee. The WR previously hyperextended this knee in a 13-11 Week 6 loss to the Denver Broncos, which forced him to miss Weeks 7 and 8.

Wilson missing more time would be costly for a Jets offense that ranked last in the league in passing yards (143.8) through the first nine weeks of the season. He's one of the few reliable weapons on the unit. Entering Sunday, he had logged 36 receptions for 395 yards and four TD catches in six games.

Minnesota Vikings LB Jonathan Greenard

In the third quarter of Minnesota's home game against the Baltimore Ravens, Greenard injured his left shoulder while chasing QB Lamar Jackson. He briefly remained on the ground before walking to the medical tent and exiting.

Following Minnesota's 27-19 loss, head coach Kevin O'Connell provided little detail about the injury. The coach said the LB would have his shoulder examined on Sunday and Monday and would provide an update once he had that information.

Greenard is a key piece for Minnesota's defense. He has 33 pressures in his first eight games, tied for the 16th most in the league.

Without him, the Vikings struggled to pressure Jackson. The two-time league MVP took just one sack against Minnesota.

Buffalo Bills TE Dalton Kincaid

Kincaid was ruled out because of a hamstring injury in the second half of Buffalo's 30-13 road loss to the Miami Dolphins. The third-year TE out of Utah had two receptions for 37 yards.

Hamstring injuries can last anywhere from a week to multiple weeks, depending on the severity of the strain. The Bills hope it's a mild hamstring injury for Kincaid, who has been their No. 1 option in the passing game this season.

Entering Sunday, the TE led the team in receiving yards (411). Without him, the Bills' air attack lacks firepower, especially after general manager Brandon Beane didn't add another pass-catcher before the trade deadline passed.

NFL Week 10 MVP's

Jonathan Taylor, RB, Indianapolis Colts: With quarterback Daniel Jones starting to show some cracks in his play, Taylor might have to be the workhorse for the Colts offense. He has been all season, and he was again on Sunday by rushing for 244 yards and three touchdowns against the Atlanta Falcons, including the game-winning overtime touchdown.

TreVeyon Henderson, RB, New England Patriots: Quarterback Drake Maye is not the only young star in New England's offensive backfield, and Henderson showed that on Sunday by rushing for 147 yards on 14 carries with two touchdowns in a breakout performance for the rookie.

New York Jets special teams: How do you win a football game where your quarterback completes 6-of-11 passes for only 54 yards? You score two special teams touchdowns, including a 99-yard kickoff return by Kene Nwangwu and a 74-yard punt return by Isaiah Williams.

De'Von Achane, RB, Miami Dolphins: The Dolphins might not be going anywhere this season, but credit to them for not rolling over and absolutely crushing one of the AFC's best teams in the Buffalo Bills. Achane was the big star of the game with 174 yards and two touchdowns rushing, while also adding 51 yards receiving.

Detroit Lions offense: Speculation mounted on Sunday that head coach Dan Campbell had taken over the team's play-calling on offense. Whether he did or not, the Lions offense scored on all eight of their possessions, excluding the end-of-game kneel down in a 44-22 win over the Washington Commanders.

DeMarcus Lawrence, DL, Seattle Seahawks: Lawrence was everywhere for the Seahawks defense, recording four tackles, half a sack, a tackle for loss, three quarterback hits, two passes defended and two fumble return touchdowns. That is a winner. That is also defensive player of the week.

Matthew Stafford, QB, Los Angeles Rams: Another week, another four-touchdown game for Stafford. He is now up to 25 touchdowns and only two interceptions for the season, and his fourth touchdown effort on Sunday was his third consecutive game with at least four touchdown passes.

NFL Week 10 Ugly's

Brian Daboll, HC, New York Giants: If Daboll's seat was not already hot, it has absolutely burned up after his team blew a double-digit second half lead. Daboll was fired after the 2-8 Giants fell 24-20 to the Chicago Bears. Even with a good young quarterback, there remains no progress here.

Minnesota Vikings mistakes: The Vikings were a mess on Sunday, committing 13 penalties, including an almost incomprehensible eight false starts, while turning the football over three times. That sort of effort is not going to beat any team on any week.

Jacksonville Jaguars: Just the whole operation goes in the ugly column here. The Jaguars had a divisional opponent down for the count and a chance to put some serious distance between them in the AFC South (and wild-card) standings. And then they allowed the Houston Texans, with a backup quarterback, to outscore them 26-0 in the fourth quarter. That turned a 29-10 Jaguars lead into a 36-29 defeat. Cannot happen.

Roughing the passer penalties: There were multiple roughing the passer penalties on Sunday on plays where defenders simply sacked the quarterback and did not land properly. These were not late hits, or hits to the head, or anything else egregious. They were sacks. Tackles in a tackle football game. Michael Strahan had seen enough and reminded everybody quarterbacks are football players as well.

Carolina Panthers playoff chances: Just when you may have starting to convince yourself that the Panthers might be able to play their way back into the NFC playoff picture, they laid an egg against a previously one-win New Orleans Saints team to drop to 5-5 on the season. Definitely an improved team, but obviously still a long way to go for the Panthers.

PRO FOOTBALL BEST BETS

Cleveland Browns vs Baltimore Ravens

Line: Ravens -8.5, O/U 42

Defensive intensity and game pace define this AFC North rematch, and everything about these teams' current profiles points toward a low-scoring grind. Cleveland's defense continues to set the tone for every opponent it faces, holding teams to an NFL-best 4.3 yards per play and just 31% on third down. They consistently generate negative plays without blitzing, collapsing pockets and forcing drives to stall before the red zone. Baltimore's offense, meanwhile, has struggled to sustain rhythm on the road, converting under 30% of its third downs in recent trips and averaging fewer than five yards per snap outside of scripted series.

Both teams rely heavily on their ground games, which further squeezes total possessions. Cleveland ranks top five in rushing attempts per game, while Baltimore runs the ball at the league's third-highest rate. That combination drains the clock quickly and limits explosive-play potential. The Ravens' defense has also been elite at containing chunk gains, allowing only one play of 30+ yards since Week 6. Combine that with Cleveland's top-three red-zone stop rate and you get a matchup where field goals, not touchdowns, are the expected finish to sustained drives.

Discipline and field position will magnify that slow tempo. The Browns have committed fewer than five penalties per game at home all season, while the Ravens average over seven on the road. In divisional settings with this kind of physicality, drives are often extended or halted by flags — and both sides prefer to settle for safe points rather than risk turnovers. Weather conditions in Cleveland this time of year frequently add wind factors that favor conservative play-calling, and both kicking games have been reliable enough to keep coaches patient.

This sets up as a classic defensive duel where possessions are long, scoring chances are limited, and either team could win in the teens. Expect trench dominance, clock control, and another low-output total typical of these two physical rivals.

TAKE: UNDER 42

Houston Texans at Tennessee Titans

Line: Texans -7, O/U 40

Houston's narrow Week 10 win masked just how much this team dominates line-of-scrimmage metrics. Over their last four games, the Texans have averaged 6.3 yards per play while allowing only 4.5 — a net differential of +1.8 that ranks top three in the league over that span. Their defensive front continues to overwhelm inferior offensive lines, posting double-digit tackle-for-loss totals in consecutive games. That directly targets Tennessee's greatest weakness: negative early-down plays that lead to third-and-longs.

The Titans have lost five straight by at least one score, largely due to inefficiency on first down (just 3.8 yards per snap). They've fallen behind early in possession count nearly every week since September, and they struggle to generate explosives through the air. Against aggressive coverage looks, their completion rate drops below 58%. Houston's defense has been quietly elite against that profile, limiting opponents to a 68 QB rating on passes beyond 15 yards.

Offensively, the Texans' balance keeps opponents honest. They've rushed for 120+ yards in three straight outings and are averaging nearly 34 minutes of possession. Expect Houston to continue pounding the middle to wear down a Tennessee unit that's 30th in red-zone defense. On the other side, the Titans' offense has reached the end zone only twice in its past 12 quarters.

Situationally, Houston enters off an emotional comeback and should avoid a flat start knowing the division stakes. Tennessee's morale appears broken after squandering two late leads in three weeks. Houston's statistical edge in both trenches plus its discipline in penalty margin (fewest flags per game since Week 6) make the full-touchdown number reasonable. Anything below -9 projects as strong value given pace, yardage control, and red-zone disparity.

TAKE: TEXANS -7

Pittsburgh Steelers vs Cincinnati Bengals

Line: Steelers -5.5, O/U 50

Pittsburgh bounced back emphatically in Week 10 with its defense dictating tempo. The Steelers forced five turnovers, but that wasn't fluky — it reflected schematic control. Over the past month, they've generated pressure on 41% of opponent dropbacks, and at home that number climbs past 45%. Cincinnati's offensive line, meanwhile, remains among the league's least efficient, surrendering 3.2 sacks per game and ranking bottom-five in run-block win rate.

The Steelers' offense benefits from those extra possessions. While not explosive, their red-zone scoring rate has improved from 36% in September to 57% since Week 6. Facing a Bengals defense allowing 5.6 yards per play and showing major tackling issues at the second level, Pittsburgh's run-first formula sets up well. Expect heavy use of short passing to stay ahead of schedule and avoid Cincinnati's blitz looks.

Cincinnati's situational metrics on the road are disastrous. They've been outscored 62-16 in first halves away from home and trail in time of possession by nearly 11 minutes per game. That matters against a Steelers team that plays slow, milks clock, and forces opponents to finish drives under duress.

Weather at Acrisure Stadium often benefits physical defenses this time of year, and Pittsburgh ranks top-three in opponent field-goal percentage allowed outdoors. Combined with superior trench play and crowd noise advantage, it's difficult to see Cincinnati keeping this within one possession for long.

TAKE: STEELERS -5.5

Philadelphia Eagles vs Detroit Lions

Line: Eagles -2, O/U 48

Philadelphia's Monday night grind-out win over Green Bay showcased the formula that's kept this team near the top of the NFC — patience, physicality, and turnover control. The Eagles have outgained opponents by 80+ yards in three of their last four, holding the ball for nearly 35 minutes per game. That sustained tempo now faces a Detroit team that thrives on pace and explosive plays but has struggled whenever forced into longer possessions.

The Lions' defense has quietly regressed, surrendering 31 points per game over their past month and allowing opponents to convert 50% on third down. Their pass rush has dropped from 34 sacks through Week 6 to only 6 since. That's problematic against an Eagles offense ranking second in pressure-allowed percentage and top-five in rushing efficiency on third-and-shorts.

Defensively, Philadelphia's secondary is beginning to tighten after early-season miscommunication issues. Over the past three games, opponents have averaged just 5.7 yards per pass attempt. Detroit's dependence on after-catch yardage won't be as productive if the Eagles continue tackling cleanly at the perimeter.

Special teams and field position lean toward Philadelphia as well. They own the NFL's second-best average starting field position since mid-October, while Detroit ranks 28th. With both clubs eyeing top playoff seeding, expect a statement effort from the home side in prime time.

PRO FOOTBALL QUICK PICKS

New York Jets at New England Patriots (Thursday)

Line: Patriots -11.5, O/U 43

New England continues to own this matchup, winning 13 of the last 14 at home. The Patriots' defensive pressure has surged since midseason, producing 11 sacks and six takeaways in their past three outings. The Jets' offensive line has collapsed under constant duress, and they've averaged fewer than 250 total yards per game on the road. Expect the Patriots' ground control and situational dominance to carry the night.

TAKE: PATRIOTS -11.5

Washington Commanders vs Miami Dolphins (Madrid, 9:30 AM ET)

Line: Dolphins -2.5, O/U 48

Miami rediscovered offensive balance last week and should enjoy similar success against a Washington defense surrendering over 30 points per game since Week 7. The Commanders' secondary continues to give up explosive plays, and their pass rush rarely gets home on neutral fields. Miami's speed and quick-strike capability remain the difference in these overseas settings.

TAKE: DOLPHINS -2.5

Carolina Panthers at Atlanta Falcons

Line: Falcons -3.5, O/U 42

Atlanta's passing game remains inconsistent, and its defense has begun to wear down under heavy snap counts. Carolina's renewed rushing attack has kept games close, averaging 4.9 yards per carry in back-to-back weeks. Expect the Panthers to shorten the game with sustained drives and capitalize on red-zone miscues from an error-prone Falcons offense.

TAKE: PANTHERS +3.5

Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Buffalo Bills

Line: Bills -5.5, O/U 49

Buffalo's offense continues to be plagued by penalties and early-down inefficiency, while Tampa Bay's disciplined front has held opponents below 100 rushing yards in six of nine games. The Buccaneers have outperformed expectations on the road thanks to turnover margin and defensive red-zone efficiency. With the Bills struggling to separate late in games, this number feels inflated.

TAKE: BUCCANEERS +5.5

Los Angeles Chargers at Jacksonville Jaguars

Line: Chargers -2.5, O/U 44

The Chargers' defense ranks top five in third-down stops and has allowed only two touchdowns over its last eight quarters. Jacksonville's offensive inconsistency and late-game collapses remain a major liability, particularly in clock-control situations. Los Angeles' ball security and superior pass rush give it the steadier path to a road victory.

TAKE: CHARGERS -2.5

GET OUR GUARANTEED NFL PICKS CLICK HERE

Chicago Bears at Minnesota Vikings

Line: Vikings -3, O/U 48

Chicago's balanced offense has quietly evolved into one of the league's most efficient, averaging 6.2 yards per play in its past three contests. Minnesota's defense continues to struggle with coverage breakdowns and penalties on third downs. The Bears' ability to extend drives and limit mistakes gives them an edge in another tight NFC North battle.

TAKE: BEARS +3

Green Bay Packers at New York Giants

Line: Packers -8.5, O/U 44

Green Bay's offense remains inconsistent, producing just 20 total points in its last two road games. The Giants' defensive front still generates interior pressure and has forced turnovers in three straight outings. With both teams playing conservatively, the Giants' home-field energy and field-position advantage could keep this one inside the number.

TAKE: GIANTS +8.5

San Francisco 49ers at Arizona Cardinals

Line: 49ers -2.5, O/U 48

Arizona's defense has allowed at least 30 points in four of its last five and now faces one of the most efficient ground games in football. San Francisco's offensive balance and time-of-possession edge should control tempo throughout. Look for the 49ers to reassert themselves physically after a choppy stretch of play.

TAKE: 49ERS -2.5

Seattle Seahawks at Los Angeles Rams

Line: Rams -2.5, O/U 48

Seattle's offense has found its stride, scoring 44 points last week and generating 17 explosive plays in two games. The Rams' secondary is inconsistent, and their defense has given up over 400 yards in three of the last five outings. Seattle's ability to sustain drives will translate well in this rematch.

TAKE: SEAHAWKS +2.5

Kansas City Chiefs at Denver Broncos

Line: Chiefs -3.5, O/U 45

Kansas City's defense continues to dictate outcomes, ranking first in red-zone stops and third in yards per play allowed. Denver's offensive rhythm has disappeared again, averaging just 14 points over its past three. With superior coaching, discipline, and pass-rush depth, both Kansas City and Denver should find it difficult to score points. GET OUR GUARANTEED SIDE PICK CLICK HERE

TAKE: UNDER 45

Dallas Cowboys at Las Vegas Raiders (MNF)

Line: Cowboys -3.5, O/U 50

Dallas' offense remains unreliable on the road, while Las Vegas has shown fight with improved defensive execution. The Raiders' recent takeaway surge has fueled competitive performances. With momentum trending down for offenses, expect another tight finish under the lights.
